Email from Michael Romano

Hello everyone,

I'm sorry to have to write this, and I'm likely leaving out another board member from this email (like Jorge, I don't have his), but last night playing at The Eagle, I had a very negative altercation with Lee Davis. Normally I would not bother if someone was an asshole, but the level of vulgarity and outright rudeness of his words leave me feeling that they need to be addressed, lest it happens again to someone else.

What happened is as follows: Lee was playing a game against my teammate Andressa and went to shoot the eight ball. He hit it, made it, and the cueball came all the way back up the table to scratch in the corner. I was standing and talking to Gina, on the Eagle's team, and as the ball was rolling to the pocket I said, "No no no don't do that!" Lee comes over, says to Gina and what I assumed was also myself as I was standing with her, "I should have put (some other type of English on the ball - I don't recall if he said left or right)". I responded saying, "I don't think that shot really needed any english."

He got irate and started yelling at me, to which I responded, "Lee, I'm really sorry. I had no intentions of upsetting you and I deeply apologize for saying anything to make you angry." He didn't let off, and while I do not remember every last thing he said, over the course of it the intentions of what he was saying were absolutely clear. Essentially, his entire rant at me boiled down to this: "Who gives a fuck what a young, stupid whore like you thinks about a game of pool? You aren't good enough to tell me anything."

I completely understand being upset over doing something like that in pool. I'm no saint, earlier that night I got very angry over a group of random strangers playing who impacted shot causing me to lose a game. What I did though was walk up to my opponent after the game, congratulate them on the win, and leave the bar for a few minutes to cool down and not take my anger out on anyone on The Eagle's team or even my own unjustly. Lee never used the word "whore", but over his rant it is exactly what he meant and intended to convey. He intended to hurt me emotionally, and quite honestly it did.

I don't have any recommendations for what I think should happen to him, and I do not want him to be kicked out of the league (at least this season) as that unjustly punishes The Eagle's team. Lee is a very great player and I don't want them to lose him over this as they need him right now. However, I don't know what actions could or should be taken regarding this, and I wanted to bring it to the boards attention because the level of vitriol and hate that was spewed at me from him. It was incredibly disrespectful and hurtful, as it was intended to be, and absolutely unbecoming of the sportsmanship this league is supposed to uphold.

I'm sorry that I even feel that I had to write you this e-mail, but I absolutely will not stand for him treating me, or anyone else, in this fashion. It's okay to get upset over a game. It is NOT okay to take that frustration out on others. This is the second time I have had him completely lose his cool and taken it out directly on me, the last time being when he played with me on The Eagle's team - years- ago. If he did it then and did it last night, he'll do it again to someone else if they accidentally cross him when he's not playing how he wants to.

Thank you guys for all that you do to keep this league running, and I appreciate your time regarding this issue immensely.

Michael Romano=
